

Les processus de la traduction

Bianca Anamaria ARION¹, Marilena MILCU²

The studies that we have access to nowadays to understand translation have shown us that linguistics is a way of communication on one hand, and on the other a reproduction of words so that they can be understood by everybody. Processes such as "adaptation", "reformulation" and "popularization" are integral parts of translation and ways of conveying information to the target audience; in other words, through these processes we convert the technical-scientific language into one understood by everyone.

Keywords: reformulation, popularization, adaptation
